

Railroad Re-enactment and Commemorative Coin

FL: Going back to Cherry Street, just a minute. They had a re-enactment in '59—'60 I guess it was. They had the rail train, rail re-enactment. We were just learning about the history of Vienna. They had the real steam engine, backed the cars up, had soldiers on it. They threw these coins off commemorating what it was at that time—the first railway battle or something. I got one of them. My son-in-law—who is retiring tomorrow, by the way, he works with disabled veterans—he is a train buff. I gave it to him. He has it in his showcase with my dad's railroad pass on the Southern Railroad, years ago.
